Introduction

Since 2016, Defenders Protection Initiative has enhanced its focus towards mitigating the unintended consequences orchestrated by Financial Action Task Force (FATF) inspired laws/ regulations on the activities of legitimate charities in Uganda. During this period, DPI has been able to broaden her AML/CFT capacity building initiatives in 8 regions of Uganda, conducted research and strategic engagements by and for civil society actors as a pushback strategy against over-regulation.

As part of her novel initiatives, DPI will conduct a Virtual Roundtable Discussions and Report Launch of the study conducted between December 2020 and March 2021, titled: Anti-Money Laundering and Counter-Terrorism Financing (AML/CTF) Laws: “An Examination of Their Impact on Civic Space in Uganda”.

This comes against a backdrop of a systematic build-up of contracting civic space in Uganda, largely fueled by among other mechanisms, a litany of laws mostly having negative implications on the operating environment for civil society organizations in Uganda.

Background

In the aftermath of the September 11, 2001, terror attacks on the United States of America (USA), countries around the world took heightened measures to enhance their national security and protect the life and property of their citizens. More significantly, the attack on the US created impetus for a global approach to the collective fight against terrorism. The United Nations which is the converging organ for all nations around the world has been at the forefront of this approach.

Over the last few years, the UN has come up with different strategies to empower individual memberstates in countering terrorism within their national jurisdictions while at the same time contributing to their collective responsibility to ensure that the world is safe. The initiative for countries to adopt Anti-Money Laundering (AML) and Counter Terrorism Finance (CTF) laws and policies has been one of the most prominent approaches in this endeavour. This approach (use of AML/CTF legislation) to counter terrorism is highly complimented by the work of the Financial Action Task Force (FATF)- an inter-governmental organisation founded in 1989.

By virtue of it being a member state, Uganda is enjoined to follow the UN counter terrorism recommendations including the adoption of relevant AML and CTF legislations. Similarly, although Uganda is not a member of FATF, it is obliged to follow its recommendations as a matter of international comity. Besides, Uganda and East Africa as a region has had its own bitter experience with terrorism. On July 11, 2010, the country experienced its worst terror attack in the form of twin bombings at two prominent places of entertainment. In both these attacks a substantial number of lives were lost (76 people) while many others were left with permanent

While the adoption of laws for the control of terrorism financing is a very critical step in the fight against terrorism, there is a growing concern that the enforcement of such counter terrorism measures without due regard to due process and fundamental rights and freedoms can have devastating consequences for the operations of civil society.

Against this backdrop, the Defenders Protection Initiative (DPI) with the support from the Civil Society in Uganda Support Programme (CUSP), which is implemented by the Deutsche Gesellschaft für Internationale Zusammenarbeit (GIZ) GmbH, with financial support from the European Union and the German government, commissioned a study whose objective was to examine the impact of Uganda's anti-money laundering and counter terrorism legislation on civic space. In addition to this, the study also explored the extent to which FATF style regulations have impacted on the operations of civil society in Uganda.
